Get Comfortable with Different Payment Methods

Take a moment to review the following ways customer payments can be accepted.

- For both types of cards, follow terminal prompts to complete the transaction

Contactless Cards

- The EMVCo Contactless Indicator  on a customer's card means they can pay by tapping their contactless card near the EMVCo Contactless Symbol  on the POS terminal*
- Follow terminal prompts to complete the transaction

Mobile / Wearables

- Customers can pay by tapping their mobile or wearable device near the EMVCo Contactless Symbol  on the POS terminal*
- Follow terminal prompts to complete the transaction

Provide a Smoother Checkout Experience with Chip Cards

Chip implementation can vary around the world, so providing a satisfying customer experience can depend on being prepared if payment challenges arise.

If inserting or swiping the card does not work on the first try

- Follow terminal prompts instructing when to insert and when to swipe (you may be asked to retry up to three times)
- Let customers know they will be charged only once for a transaction

If swiping or inserting does not work on multiple attempts

- Manually enter the card information (if your business allows)

If the terminal prompts "invalid card," "card not accepted" or similar language when card is inserted

- Try swiping to complete purchase

*Applicable when terminal supports contactless payments
